

(Employee 1 is sitting at lunch room table. Employee 2 walks up and sits down)

Employee 2: Hey (name)! How's your day been?

Employee 1: Same old, same old... How about yourself?

Employee 2: Pretty interesting actually. I was reviewing the tax return submitted by Joe Fastball.

Employee 1: Joe Fastball of the Cincinnati Reds? Really?

Employee 2: Yeah, and you won't believe what I saw. He claimed income from the New York Yankees!

Employee 1: The Yankees? I don't believe it. That's pretty big news if he's getting traded.

(Employee 3 enters)

Employee 3: Hey guys, what are you talking about? I thought I heard you mention Joe Fastball.

Employee 1: (name) says he claimed income from the Yankees! I think he's getting traded.

Employee 3: You know, you shouldn't be talking about confidential taxpayer information at the lunch table.

Employee 2: Don't worry, it's not a big deal if we discuss stuff with other ODT employees.

Employee 3: Umm... I'm not so sure about that. You should probably reexamine the disclosure training on IRC Section 6103. It says that there has to be a proper business purpose to disclose taxpayer information – even with other Taxation employees.

(Employee 3 leaves)

Employee 1: Maybe she's right (name)

Employee 2: Nah... I'm sure about this one. So, I was thinking about calling my husband's cousin. His cousin knows a guy who works at the stadium.

Employee 1: Really? Could he get me tickets?

(Employees continue to talk as scene fades to black)
